PRESS RELEASE

REMINDER: ACCESS LEADERSHIP SCHOLARS PROGRAM

Palmyra, NJ (7/31/18) – The Foundation (ARMA International Educational Foundation - AIEF), is excited to announce the availability of the Access Leadership Scholarship program. If you are currently employed as a RIM professional and are working towards a college degree, you may be eligible for a scholarship of up to $6,000 from the Access Leadership Scholars program. The goal of this program, now in its fifth year, is to enable outstanding RIM practitioners to advance to positions of greater responsibility that require college degrees and to advance their leadership skills for roles in the field of information management.

Awards have been made in prior years to RIM practitioners working in six states across the U.S. at companies including Phillips 66, Booz Allen Hamilton, Sealy & Co, Nova Southeastern University and Houston Community College. Several awardees recounted being the first in their families to go to college.

Access CEO Rob Alston says that, “Access has long been committed to active participation in our local communities and in the broader community of RIM practitioners. We believe that this level of engagement is part of who we are and how we make a difference as a company and as Access team members.” Mike Smith, Chair of the Foundation, states that “This program has enabled larger scholarships, making a real difference in upward mobility for talented people held back by the absence of a degree.”

Deadline for applications is August 31, 2018.

Criteria and applications are now available on the Foundation website::
